ARTS OPPORTUNITIES IN SAN DIEGO Grants, Webinars, Workshops, Resources and More

SD Matters: Artists count - Regional artist survey and project funding opportunity

Artists Count is a workforce development and research initiative designed to support artists living and working in the San Diego–Tijuana region. It is about recognizing that artists are essential to our binational community. The program provides direct funding to selected artists while also gathering information about how artists live and work across our region. That research will help shape future policies, partnerships, and investments in the creative workforce. It is both an opportunity for individual artists – and a long-term investment in the cultural health of our region. Learn more about the program and how to participate HERE.

HTH Curator Needed

The teachers at High Tech High are seeking a community partner to design a curation workshop in August. Help inspire them as they plan and design for student exhibitions next school year! Please reach out to Helen Shao at hshao@hightechhigh.org if you'd be interested in collaborating by June 1st.
